

Anne Panos

Anne Panos is a junior Biology major with minors in Behavioral Neuroscience and Anthropology. She currently attends Fairfield University in CT, and is from North Andover, MA. She intends to apply to Veterinary School in the upcoming application cycle, with a hope to pursue a career in Veterinary Neurology.

At Fairfield, she has done research with some of my biology professors. She has helped research and produce scientific descriptions for art pieces in the current exhibition on campus, Birds of the Northeast, and a bird guide for species found on campus. She is also currently researching the sensation abilities of the red wolves housed at Connecticut's Beardsley Zoo.