

Vaia Trittas, M.S.

Vaia Trittas received her M.S. in Professional Writing from the School of Professional Studies in 2021, and was her program's graduating class Flag Bearer in recognition of her outstanding academic performance.

Across her graduate coursework, Vaia's research and writing focused on social movement, equity, and representation through digital storytelling. She received her B.A. in Individualized Studies from the Gallatin School of Individualized Studies at New York University in 2015 with a concentration in exilic writers and artists, with an acute focus on Mikis Theodorakis, and a minor in Hellenic Studies from the College of Arts and Sciences.

Entering her tenth year with the A. S. Onassis Program in Hellenic Studies, she wears many hats as the Program's academic administrator, undergraduate student advisor, and research administrator during the spring and fall, as well as the resident advisor and program administrator of the NYU in Athens study abroad summer program.

Vaia was among the first undergraduate recipients of the Association of Greek American Professional Women's Excellence Tuition Scholarship in 2013.
